

Imagine a birds eye vantage point to see the whole Earth like you would see from space as a blue marble. As you see this wondrous view of our beautiful planet, visualize the lights, lights all over the surface of the globe. Instead of the familiar lights of cities, we see instead, the lights of billions of human souls around our planet--- brilliant golden lights coming from the precious hearts of each person.

Imagine that out of each heart these rays of golden light go from the ground to a point high above the Earth, and see how the billions of these rays of light converge on this one spot, a place above the earth that now glows with such beauty and radiance.

Above the Earth, where the rays all converge, imagine how it now becomes a magnificent heart, so brilliant with colors of golden and purple light shooting out and downward back towards all the teeming billions.

Imagine now, as you gaze upon the Earth from space, can you see how this cosmic heart now continues to pour this light back down into each heart of humanity and of the living world? Can you see the activation, the ignition of what now become webs of light that began to extend horizontally between the each of the billions of hearts on the ground. Heaven indeed is coming down to Earth.

Imagine that it is already here within you, this golden light and today we are extending this to each other as we make real the promise of a new Earth found in community.
